Program: Adult Redeploy Illinois
Logic Model
Situation: Non-violent offenders cycling through the prison system at great cost but questionable benefit to taxpayers.

Inputs
- Crime Reduction Act
- Funding (federal and state), reinvested corrections savings
- Staff
- Retired judges
- Oversight Board
- ICJIA evaluators
- Data

Activities
- Planning and pilot site implementation grants, as incentives to divert non-violent offenders from prison
- Technical assistance
  - Web site
  - Database
  - All-Sites Meetings
  - Information on Evidence-based practices
- Performance measurement and evaluation

Outputs
- Counties/Judicial circuits
- Judiciary
- Prosecution
- Defense
- Probation departments
- Community service providers
- Non-violent offenders
  - Drug involved
  - Mentally ill
  - Dually diagnosed
  - Veterans
  - Probation violators
- Governor
- General Assembly
- Public

Participation

Activities Participation

Outputs

Inputs

Outcomes
- 25% reduction in IDOC commitments from non-violent target population by increasing alternatives to incarceration and incorporating evidence-based practices
- Improved treatment outcomes – drug court graduation rates, treatment completion and retention rates
- Fewer arrests, jail stays, reconvictions
- Improved restitution payments
- Better data for decision-making

Short

Medium

Long

- Reduced prison overcrowding
- Reduced reliance on incarceration for non-violent offenders
- Lower costs to taxpayers
- Greater public safety
- Healthier and more productive families and communities
- Stronger social service safety net
- More effective use of taxpayer dollars

Assumptions
- The best way to reduce crime is to understand why people commit crimes and address underlying issues
- Non-violent offenders are often more effectively and efficiently supervised in the community
- Local communities know best who they can safely divert and how to fill gaps in their sanctions and services

External Factors
- Crime trends
- State fiscal environment
- Prison over-crowding, due to changes in corrections policies
- Other reform policies and laws

Budgeting for results